Caregiver burden is increased in Parkinson's disease with mild cognitive impairment (PD-MCI)

Abstract

Background: There is limited evidence on caregiver outcomes associated with mild cognitive impairment in patients with Parkinson's disease (PD-MCI) and the coping strategies used by these caregivers.

Methods: To investigate this relationship, we examined levels of burden, depression, anxiety, coping strategies and positive aspects of caregiving in the informal caregivers of 96 PD patients. The PD patients were classified using MD5-Task Force Level II criteria as showing either normal cognition (PD-N; n = 51), PD-MCI (n = 30) or with dementia (PDD; n = 15).

Results: Mean Zarit Burden Interview (ZBI) score increased significantly between carers of PD-N (M = 13.39, SD = 12.22) compared to those of PD-MCI patients (M = 22.00, SD = 10.8), and between carers of PD-MCI and PDD patients (M = 29.33, SD = 9.59). Moreover, the proportion of carers showing clinically significant levels of burden (ZBI score ≥ 21) also increased as the patients' cognitive status declined (18% for PD-N; 60% for PD-MCI; and 80% for PDD) and was mirrored by an increasing amount of time spent providing care by the caregivers. Caregiver ZBI score was independent of patient neuropsychiatric symptoms, motor function, disease duration and time that caregivers spent caregiving. Caregiver use of different coping strategies increased with worsening cognition. However, we found only equivocal evidence that the use of problem-focused, emotion-focused and dysfunctional coping mediated the association between patient cognitive status and caregiver burden, because the inverse models that used caregiver burden as the mediator were also significant.

Conclusions: The study highlights the impact of Parkinson's disease on those providing care when the patient's cognition is poor, including those with MCI. Caregiver well-being has important implications for caregiver support, nursing home placement and disease course.

Keywords: Parkinson's disease, Mild cognitive impairment, Zarit caregiver burden interview, Coping, Depression, Anxiety, Positive aspects of caregiving

Background

Cognitive problems are an integral part of Parkinson's disease because dementia (PDD) eventuates in 75%–90% of patients and is associated with substantial health and economic burden [1]. Patients who present with mild cognitive impairment (PD-MCI) are at high risk of progression to PDD and are a growing research focus to assess the impact of increasing cognitive impairment and to facilitate early intervention [2–5]. The impact of cognitive status on the informal caregiver is a relatively neglected dimension of PD-MCI and there is limited research on the specific effects of cognitive decline on the well-being of caregivers of these PD patients. Understanding these relationships is important because improving caregiver support and well-being may have a bearing on disease management and delay formal care and nursing home placement.

- Since 1994 there has been an improvement in numbers of all species, although the graph shows a slight decrease in 2000.
- There was also a fall in the number of woodland birds of around 30% between 1974 and 1998.
- It is only the coastal birds that have seen a steady increase in population over this period.
